SYRACUSE HANCOCK INTERNATIONAL AIRPORT LAUNCHES NEW WEBSITE

New Website, www.FlySyracuse.com, went Live on Tuesday, August 27

Syracuse, New York – On August 27, Syracuse Hancock International Airport launched their new website at www.flysyracuse.com. The new site is a complete redesign of the previous site and includes additional features for users, including the airport’s Twitter feed, live flight arrival and departure information, weather forecasts, and links to local amenities, such as accommodations, dining, and entertainment.

“We have seen fantastic progress at our airport, from the opening of the new, $60 million renovation to welcoming Allegiant Air to our market” said Syracuse Mayor Stephanie A. Miner. “This new website is yet another way we are making our airport more accessible to customers across Central New York.”

Commissioner of Aviation Christina Callahan commented that, “We are excited about launching this new site, which highlights our growing airport and the many improvements we have made to our facility”.

Users of the website will also notice that the newly designed site features a brand new web address. The old address was www.syraairport.org. If the public goes to the old address it will automatically redirect them to the new site.

The new site is optimized for mobile use and can be used just as effectively from a smart phone as from a tablet or laptop computer.

The site was designed locally by the C&S Companies (www.cscos.com) and Bentley Hoke (www.bentleyhoke.com)
